Peace Comes to Azeroth?

Contributor: Lohkawas Wildmane

Healers Unite

The call came and Healers from across Azeroth, blue and red and those in between answered steadfast and ready. The commitment to one another and to putting Azeroth first and foremost.

While Hamuul Runetotem leads the healing efforts in Silithus, there appear to larger issues that threaten our existence.

Will you join us?

Booty Bay Black Market

It was uneasy at first... both Alliance and Horde arriving in Booty Bay, Home to Swiftsilver Cartel, some to sell, some to purchase, some to watch and report, like yours truly.

The hosts kept the peace quickly and surely, much better than the bruisers at the Speed Barge, I might add.

After getting used to the idea, business was conducted, connections made, and new friends were made across old boundaries.

Peace Looms in the Distance!

Members of Horde and Alliance came together in Dalaran.... And consumed alcohol with one another. Legendary bartenders, Baast and Lohkawas, glided among the confines of Dalaran's premier corner Lounge and kept everyone's mugs topped off and ice cold.

In a time of war and strife, it appeared many were concerned for each other. Perhaps our leaders need a crisp and refreshing Spring Brew together.

Redwood Tribe News!

While no news may be good news, Baine Bloodhoof continues to be kept under lock and key. The reviews are mixed on whether the actions of the High Chieftain were honorable, or just foolish and honorable. Chieftain Abrahof Ragetotem continues to keep the Tribes united!

In the meantime, two more Firetotem have made their way to Thunder Bluff to bolster the mighty Redwood. Only one is pictured below as he meets his estranged family.

Family Meeting – They look peaceful here but have already proven their worth at the Dark Moon Faire Arena.

If anyone wants to tangle with the pride of Thunder Bluff, you should take note of the big fella on the right, and the other two are no slouches either.

Dark Iron Travels #4 by Acialga Embercast

I have made camp down by the river, had to kill a crocolisk so having a delicious crocolisk steak. As much as I prefer the warmth of the Mountain, and bubbling of the lava below, I cannot deny the beauty out here. I found a plethora of the herb needed along some old ruins, but the ruins were covered in snakes. I will have to find someone to get it for me, so making my way to the Goblin Port of Booty Bay to find some suckers.

What a crudhole! Nearly fell through the rickety boards they call a walkway as I entered Booty Bay. Every three feet another goblin tryin' to get you to buy this or that. I almost bought some ointment, but I realized it looked like the "mud" I stepped in when running from the gorillas. Even the drinks seem watered down, many, many times watered down.

Ordered a Dark Iron Ale from the bar, and realized why it was so cheap, the drink has to be at least 80% extra water. But I will not knock the goblin scammer out yet, I have business to deal with first.

Finally, the goblin I hired is back. A bundle of what I wanted and 20 bundles of random weeds. I was just so tired of the scams out here, I paid for it all just to get out of the blasted rathole of Booty Bay quicker.

I should have checked the bundles more closely, one was full of spiders, I now have a nasty bump growing on my arm from a bite, can this day get any worse?

Strangers in the Swamp by Orithwa Rivermane

Nazmir has seen a surge in Alliance activity as a new company has now made the swamp home. The Company moved into Fort Victory on Wednesday and many loads of mining equipment now encircles the small base. No word on what the company will be seeking in Nazmir, but with the looks of all the equipment it can only be dangerous for the swamp ecosystem.
